In Autumn 2016, the Glucksman invited teenagers living in Direct Provision centres around Cork City and County to come to the museum and partake in creative workshops with artists Roseanne Lynch, Cassandra Eustace, Dervla Baker and Curator of Education Tadhg Crowley. Over six weeks the group used photography, drawing and film to explore the UCC campus and beyond, plotting and mapping routes and creatively documenting their interactions and experiences.

Under the guidance of the artists the teenagers learnt about image-making for self-expression, enabling them to communicate their ideas visually with greater confidence and skill. This month, the artworks created in the workshops will go on public display in the Glucksman and will showcase the creative talents of the group. The exhibition brings together digital and film photography, drawings and a short film.
